What's New. The 4th Anniversary Event is around the corner! Participate in the event to obtain A-rarity Costume Unlock Cards and other amazing rewards! Ratings and Reviews. Great Game :) This game deserves all the hype.

Every character has an intricate design and ability that make the experience worth while. The game has a custom mode, with a concept called "single training" that allows a player to test out any character regardless if they own it or not. It allows you to test out the abilities of the character you choose while practicing against a bot. This is very beneficial when deciding what other character to add to your notebook!

The amount of puzzle pieces needed to buy a character is reasonable, if you log in every day and play for at least an hour, you'll be able to buy that character in a span of at least 3 days. The biggest issue I've seen with these reviews regards how unfair it is for a hunter to camp. Personally I don't think this concept is bad, everyone has a strategy that can aid in their victory. People have asked the game to allow the hunter to remain near the chair for a certain amount of time. However, I don't believe that would be fair for the hunter.

If the hunter is restricted on how much time to camp, then it would be fair to ask to limit the number of times they can be stunned as well right? If we change one thing there would ultimately be another area that would prove to be unfair. In conclusion, camping is not a defect of the game and if you really want to get the save take a hit and run! Take one for the team :) The game as a whole with its matches, room decoration, costumes and events make it very entertaining! It is amazing! But..

The game itself is absolutely fantastic and I love everything about! But there is one problem I have noticed, there are players around the world on identity V that aren't able to participate in events such as Persona 5 for example and they aren't able to achieve the prizes within those event.

I had an idea that there can be an event that happens once every year on identity V where all the events that have ever happened are mashed up together in one huge event where it includes all the prizes in them and even include limited items or skins and etc that's weren't a part of the event, players can get points and buy certain prizes from the store with clues, echos, or inspirations, exchange inspirations for points, or by playing a match.

These point can allow them to get the prizes that they want, but this event will only last for a certain amount of days, but on the last few days before the event ends players will get a multiplier and can get more points to give them a chance to get the prizes they want, they will also be able to earn a lot of points by paying an offering of some sort in the event that'll cost them either echoes, inspirations, or clues. I just want people like myself to have a chance to get some prizes from the past events that we haven't participated because of not being aware of this game yet.

I hope this is a good idea or at least something that can be an inspiration for an event to do something like this. Very Enjoyable! Just a little problem recentyl. First off, the game is pretty fun! You don't have to pay to win, but if you're not willing to throw cash at the game, then you'll have to grind quite often (which is something that I, personally, do not mind). Characters can be bought with echoes (currency you purchase with real money) or clues (currency rewarded in-game)!

Skins can sometimes be bought from the shop with fragments or echoes, but many skins are obtainable through Essences, which are part of the gacha side of Identity V. They have a few free characters every day and switch them up, and there are often events that come and go. Now, here's for the little problem I have that has occurred since the recent New Year update. I've tried to enter the game through my phone but it will not take me past the Netease screen, and instead, boot me out of the game.

It functions as normal on my iPad and on the PC, so this is a problem only for my phone. I've checked on my phone's storage, and it should be enough to run the game. Just in case, I have deleted many apps and other little tidbits to fill up space, and it still won't load up for me. I've uninstalled it two times by now, but I still cannot enter the game. Besides this recent problem, I really enjoy the game!! I can't wait for potential Kurt content in the future!!
